Directed by Tennessean Benjamin Owen, “Refracted Glory” features exclusive slow-motion footage of hummingbirds in flight and expert interviews. The film has been described by early reviewers as “almost encyclopedic” for depth of content and “a magnificent look at a truly complex creature.” The exploration of hummingbirds combines engineering, biology and history to shape a truly meaningful message.

Owen is an award-winning filmmaker from the Clarksville area. He began work on “Refracted Glory” in 2013, filming interviews and hummingbirds all around the United States. Rives, also of Tennessee, is a national television host and president of David Rives Ministries.
